John Warner, better known as "Big Bill", had to abandon his car in the mud near Paul Pascal's, on his way home from Great Bend last Monday evening.

The stork again visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm Harper, southwest of town, one day last week but as yet we have been unable to learn what it was he left.

The married folks' dance at the Hlavaty hall last week was a grand success and well attended. Everybody present enjoyed a pleasant evening and many didn't go home until the roosters announced the early morning. L. Zimmerman had a runaway one day last week, on the mail route. The team of mules started to run and got beyond control. The lines both broke and the wagon turned over. After dragging it some distance the team stopped, giving Lew a chance to get out. The wagon was damaged considerably, although Lew got out of the scrape without a scratch.

The entertainment given by the school children last Thursday night at the Hlavaty hall was a great success. Every one of the lots knew his part well. The Olmitz band assisted by playing between acts and the hall was filled to its capacity. A small admission fee was charged, the receipts amounting to $13.60, which was used to pay expenses.

Miss E. Mable Taylor, of Marion came in Wednesday evening for a few days visit with her many Ellinwood friends. Miss Taylor was formerly a teacher in our schools but was compelled to give up her work Christmas on account of ill health.

Bert Hammer is erecting a fine new house on one of the Hammer farms west of the city. The frame work is about all up and if the weather is not severe it will be ready for occupancy in a few weeks. It is built on the bungalow style and will be one of the neatest homes in this part of the county.

John Berscheidt, Sr., of this city, has been in a very serious condition from an attack of spinal trouble, which became so bad last Thursday that as a result Mr. Berscheidt suffered a partial stroke of paralysis of the lower limbs. He is reported as being a little improved now and has regained some use of his limbs, but his condition is still very grave.

Clarence Schrepel, who returned from the Santa Fe hospital at Topeka last week, after being confined there for several weeks with a severe attack of typhoid fever, is rapidly regaining his strength and will be able to be out and around in a short time.

Leonard Schrepel, his brother who has also been in the hospital with the same sickness, was discharged from there on Tuesday and is now visiting with his sister at Hillsboro for a few days before returning home.

Will Armstrong was in from the south side Friday and reports that his son Lawrence, who was accidentally shot some time ago while hunting, is doing along in good shape. It was necessary to amputate the thumb on one hand, and the injury to the other hand which was a flesh wound, is healing up nicely. At the time of the accident young Armstrong was in a wagon with a number of companions hunting rabbits, and his gun accidentally slipped through his hands and striking the edge of the wagon was discharged.

GLANDERS OR DISTEMPER.

The question often arises on the farm, Has the horse that is ailing a case of glanders or distemper (strangles)? Unless one be familiar with the symptoms of the two diseases it may be difficult to arrive at a correct diagnosis.

Most everyone who has handled horses has seen cases of distemper, the symptoms being as follows: The colic is more often affected than the mature horse, and is seen to be "off its feed" and having some difficulty in swallowing. The animal's coat is rough and a general unhealthy condition is very noticeable. In a very few days a doughy swelling appears in the angle of the lower jaw, thus causing the animal to carry the head stiffly. The swelling eventually softens of its own accord, breaks and discharges a thick, creamy pus. Along with the symptoms will be seen a discharge from one or both nostrils, usually continuing until complete recovery.

Distemper is highly contagious and may run its course in three or four weeks, ending in recovery.

Glanders, on the other hand, as usually seen, is more of a chronic discharge. The most marked symptom observed is a chronic, bloody discharge, usually from one nostril. If one examines the nose carefully, ulcers will be observed, from which the pus escapes and drops from the nostrils. After several months the lymphatic glands located inside the lower jaw will be found to be enlarged and extremely hard. These lymphatic glands do not form pus as in distemper, but remain hard throughout the course of the disease.

Skin glanders is called farcy. With this form of glanders will be noticed a swelling of the lymphatics along the inside of the legs. These glands in time soften and form pus. The pus from a farcy leg is of a greasy nature so that it does not stick to the hair the same as ordinary pus.

Distemper is what might be termed a benign disease, while glanders is extremely contagious and deadly, not only to other horses, but to man and is incurable. For this reason, when in doubt as to whether a horse is suffering from distemper or glanders, it is well to have your horse tested with mallein by a skilled veterinarian and not run the risk of losing all the mares on your ranch.—C. L. Baross.

CERTAIN SIGNS OF POVERTY

Impressionable Child Sets Mother, Right Regarding Financial Standing of Her Neighbors.

Small Sarah, observant and impressionable, ran into the house, excited and out of breath. She had been calling at a neighbor's house.

"Oh, mamma!" she exclaimed, "I thought you said the Smiths were very, very rich!"

"So I did, Susie," the mother replied. "The Smiths are understood to be worth millions."

"Mamma," said the child, "I don't believe a word of it. I think they are very poor."

"Why, Susie," remarked the astonished mother, "how did you get such an idea into your head?"

"Cause I saw two ladies playing on a piano at the same time," was Susie's response.

"That's often done," mother explained. "The ladies were playing a duet."

"But that wasn't all, mamma. Mrs. Smith's hat looks for all the world like her kitchen colander trimmed, and George Smith was wearing his father's trousers."

"Why, Susie," commented the mother, "how you talk!"

"It's true, all the same, mamma. I know they were Mr. Smith's trousers, 'cause they were so long for George that he had 'em turned up at the bottom of each leg."

Small Sarah was unfamiliar with trousers adorned with "cuffs."

SQUIRREL SHOWS DEEP GRIEF

Mourns Over Severed Head of Mate With Intensity That Seems Almost Human.

Almost every public park in the United States has its lively and half-domesticated colony of squirrels, and there is no other creature of the woods and fields with which city children may—and do—become so familiar. An interesting story which shows the depth of feeling which these little animals are capable, comes to the Companion from Waterloo, Ia.

A physician who lives near one of the parks in that city had long had an especial interest in a pair of squirrels which made their home in a tree within sight of his house. One day he noticed that one of this pair was running up and down a certain tree in the park, meanwhile chattering in the greatest excitement. Finally the little fellow appeared on a branch, holding between his paws the severed head of his mate, over which he was moaning and whining pitifully. On investigation, it appeared that the dead squirrel had been caught and actually decapitated by a limb split off from the tree by a storm of the night before. The grief-stricken mate would not abandon the body all that day, and mourned over the severed head with an intensity and absorption which seemed almost human, with a depth of emotion indeed, of which some human beings are hardly capable.—Youth's Companion.

Street Cries in Minor Key.

"Street cries are nearly always in the minor key," says the Paris Journal des Debats. And an English commentator avers that this key is maintained in our own street cries—such as "Sweet Lavender." And he thinks the explanation is that the minor key involves less strain on the throat that has to emit the same cry all day long. But London cries are few of them in the minor key of the Parisian boy who heralds the evening on the boulevards with "Volla Le Sol." Our own newspaper boy has cultivated the raucous monotone that collects politics and murders into one simple yell. There is nothing of the minor key about the milkman's announcement. And perhaps the least musical of all cries is that of the man who hawks coal about the street. He does not shout "Coal." No stranger would suspect him of coal. He emits only a single bellow, repeated at short intervals, a bellow without form or comeliness; it is the least common denominator of the street cry.

Tomb of Omar Khayyam.

Major Sykes was shown the tomb near a shrine that stood in a garden of roses. "The bones of Omar Khayyam, who as a Sunni (an adherent of a heterodox Mohammedan sect) 'is held in disfavor by the fanatical in Persia, do not,' he says, 'rest inside the chamber, but turning to the eastern wing an uninscribed plastered tomb was shown us, and here Omar Khayyam is buried. One advantage at least is preserved to the poet, which is that, as he foretold, the trees shed their blossoms on him twice a year; in other words, the blossoms of the fruit trees in the garden are carried to his grave.'—Travel and Exploration.

Wonderful Island.

New Zealand has one of the most marvelous and phenomenal islands in the world. It is situated in the Bay of Plenty and is called White Island, and consists mainly of sulphur mixed with gypsum and a few other minerals. Over the island, which is about three miles in circumference, and rises over 800 feet above the sea, there continually floats an immense cloud of vapor, often attaining an altitude of 10,000 feet. In the center is a boiling lake of acid-charged water, covering 50 acres and surrounded with bluish holes from which steam and sulphurous fumes are emitted with great force and noise. With care a boat can be navigated on the lake.

HOW SHE HAD LEARNED IT.

After a lesson on digestion the teacher, anxious to know just how far her instruction had reached, questioned the class.

The first answer was not very encouraging, as the little girl called up on said:

"Digestion begins in the mouth and ends in the big and little testament."

The Royal Neighbors rendered a surprise party to Mrs. Henry Miller of Buffalo township, at the home of Fred Miller in this city on Thursday afternoon of last week. They had a splendid time.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the announcement of R. J. McMullen of Ellinwood who seeks the nomination on the Democratic ticket for County Attorney. Roy is a Barton county product, the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. McMullen, for many years residents of Buffalo township, where the young man grew up. He formerly taught school, and then worked his way through the State University Law School. For the past year he has been a practicing attorney at Ellinwood with marked success. If nominated and elected, he will fill the office with ability.
